Texas State Historical Association

119th Annual Meeting

March 5 – 7, 2015
Omni Corpus Christi Hotel
NextAfter

Enjoy your time at the 2015 Annual Meeting! The attendees of the 119th Annual Meeting were able to experience the latest in digital history, as well as the traditional aspects of the TSHA, including the annual meeting, which was held in Corpus Christi. The meeting was hosted by the Texas State Historical Association, and the proceedings were organized into several sessions, including a keynote address, a panel discussion, and a roundtable discussion.

The TSHA is a member of the Association of State and Local History, and the meeting was held in collaboration with the University of Texas at Austin. The keynote address was given by Dr. John M. Parker, who discussed the importance of historical research in the 21st century. The panel discussion focused on the role of technology in historical research, and the roundtable discussion explored the challenges and opportunities of digital history.

The meeting also featured a number of exhibits, including a display of rare books and documents, as well as a display of photographs and other visual materials. The exhibits were organized by the University of Texas Press, and the exhibits were open to the public.

In addition to the exhibits, there were a number of special events, including a reception for TSHA Fellows, a presentation of awards, and a presidential banquet. The reception was held at the Texas Capitol, and the presentation of awards was held in conjunction with the University of Texas at Austin. The presidential banquet was held at the Texas State Historical Association, and the banquet was attended by the Association's leadership and members.

Overall, the meeting was a success, and it provided an opportunity for historians to network and share their research. The TSHA is looking forward to its 120th Annual Meeting, which will be held in 2016.
Dear TSHA Members and Friends,

Welcome to Texas State Historical Association’s 119th Annual Meeting, which we are delighted to hold in Corpus Christi, Texas. As many of you know, this is my first Annual Meeting, and I am both honored and excited to be a part of TSHA. I look forward to meeting as many of our attendees, presenters, and exhibitors as possible over the next few days. As Chief Executive Officer of the Association, my mission is to preserve and promote history in the great state of Texas. TSHA continues to fulfill its mission of preserving and promoting history in the great state of Texas.

I look forward to many more Annual Meetings. See you in Corpus Christi.
